Information Seeking and Decision-Making in Online Sports Betting
HUM# 00301553

Principal Investigator: Libby Hemphill, PhD, University of Michigan School of Information, libbyh@umich.edu

Student Researchers: Liam Bredeweg, Andres Rodriguez

You are invited to participate in a research study about how young adults (18 - 24 year olds) find and use information when they bet on sports online. We are interested in understanding where bettors get information (whether it be friends, social media, stats websites, ads, etc.), and how they process and use that information when placing actual bets.

If you agree to be part of the research study, you will be asked to take part in an interview lasting around 60 minutes. During the interview you will be asked about your betting behavior and the information that surrounds this betting process. You will be asked to complete a short mapping activity where you will diagram the people, apps, and other information sources you use.

Benefits of the research include contributing to a better understanding of betting behavior and information sources around betting and sports. The research may provide insight for future standards and policies around betting.

Risks and discomforts: This study asks about personal betting habits and financial decisions, which some people may find sensitive or uncomfortable. You are free to skip any question and may stop the interview at any time.

Compensation: you will be emailed a virtual gift card of $20 within 30 days of the interview.

If you receive any payments for taking part in this study, the University of Michigan finance department will need your name and address for tax reporting purposes. In a calendar year if: 1) your payments total greater than $400 for this study or 2) if you receive payments of greater than $400 for being in more than one study, the University of Michigan finance department will also require your Social Security Number for tax reporting purposes. If you do not wish to provide your Social Security Number, you may continue to participate in research studies, but you will not be able to receive payment for the remainder of the calendar year.

Participating in this study is completely voluntary. Even if you decide to participate now, you may change your mind and stop at any time. You may choose not to continue with the interview for any reason.

Protecting and Sharing Research Information

With your permission, we will record and transcribe the interview. UM Zoom generates a transcript that your interviewer will review and use his/her best efforts to remove personal information that could identify you. S/he will then assign you a participant id (e.g., Participant A) and store the transcript under that identifier in the study team's shared Google Drive. Examples of information that might appear in the transcript that the interviewer will remove are your name or which dorm you live in. Any documents you create during the interview, such as your information horizon map, will also be stored in Google Drive under your participant ID.

We will protect the confidentiality of your research records by storing them in restricted-access Google Drive folders and U-M cloud computing environments. The term "cloud" refers to large computers located in different parts of the world where individuals may keep and remotely access their personal and professional files. Each cloud service has its own policies and methods for preventing unauthorized individuals from accessing files stored on their cloud servers. The cloud service used to store files associated with this study meets University of Michigan protection standards.

De-identified data generated from the information you provide in our interaction may be shared with the research community to advance scholarly knowledge. We plan to deposit the data at ICPSR or a similar social science domain repository. We will use our best efforts to remove personal information that could identify you before the data are shared in an effort to ensure that, by current scientific standards and known methods, no one will be able to identify you from the shared data. Despite these measures, we cannot guarantee complete anonymity.
